

Kim Yvette Burney, BSN, RN, MSNed, OCN has been an oncology nurse for over 37 years. She obtained a Baccalaureate degree in nursing from Tuskegee University in 1988 and started her career in oncology in Los Angeles, CA. She moved to Atlanta in 1991 and continued to work in oncology at Crawford Long Hospital and worked there until the year 2000 when she began working in the outpatient setting for Georgia Cancer Specialists (GCS). Kim worked there for 12 years and held several positions including infusion nurse, clinic manager and regional supervisor. In 2012, she accepted a position as manager of clinical oncology at Emory, Saint Joseph's in Atlanta, GA. She was invited to become a member of the speakers' bureau at Onyx Pharmaceuticals in 2012 responsible for speaking and teaching about a specific oncology drug which prepared her for her current position at J&J.

She started at Janssen as a Clinical Nurse Educator as a contracted employee in 2015, and was officially hired by Janssen in 2019 as an Oncology Clinical Educator. She covers most of the state of GA, and a portion of North FL, and southwest AL. While in her current position, Kim has mentored nursing students and new employees, represented J&J by delivering presentations at meetings across the country and in Canada.

Kim is passionate about oncological education and seeks to advance the community's knowledge about cancer on and off the job. She is the Medical Information Coordinator at a non-profit organization that she co-founded called KHRYSALIS Empowerment, Inc. She currently resides outside of Atlanta, GA.
